DETAILED ACTION

Claim Objections

Claim 14 is objected to because of the following informalities:

Claim 14, first line, 'times' should be --tines--

Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1-5, 10-13, 15-18, 21, and 22 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by U.S. Patent No. 2,160,618 to Kreutzig.

Regarding Claims 1 and 15-18, Kreutzig teaches a housing (#13), said housing having an outer gripping surface; and a longitudinally extending grooming tool (#12), at least a portion of said longitudinally extending grooming tool being mounted within said housing for longitudinal sliding movement with respect to said housing (Fig. 1, 2, and 9), whereby a user may adjust the longitudinal position of the grooming tool with respect to said housing while continuously maintaining a grip on said outer gripping surface and Kreutzig inherently teaches the method steps during the operation of the device.

Regarding Claim 2, Kreutzig teaches the longitudinally extending grooming tool comprises a comb having a longitudinal axis and a plurality of tines (#12) that extend substantially perpendicularly to said longitudinal axis.

Regarding Claim 3, Kreutzig teaches the comb has a length that is no greater than a length of said housing (Fig. 2 #22).

Regarding Claim 4, Kreutzig teaches the comb is adjustable to a retracted longitudinal position with respect to said housing wherein said outer gripping surface is substantially centered with respect to said plurality of tines (Fig. 2).

Regarding Claim 5, Kreutzig teaches the comb is further adjustable to an extended longitudinal position with respect to said housing wherein said outer gripping surface is substantially longitudinally offset from said plurality of tines (Fig. 1).

Regarding Claim 10, Kreutzig teaches at least one predetermined stop position of longitudinal adjustment of said grooming tool with respect to said housing (Fig. 1 #20).

Regarding Claims 11 and 21, Kreutzig teaches a means for releasably positioning said grooming tool in said at least one predetermined stop position (Fig. 1).

Regarding Claims 12 and 22, Kreutzig teaches locking means for locking said longitudinally extending grooming tool in a desired position with respect to said housing (#20).

Regarding Claim 13, Kreutzig teaches a comb having a shank (#10) portion and a plurality of tines (#12), and wherein at least a portion of said shank portion is mounted for longitudinal sliding movement within the housing while said tines are positioned externally of said housing so as to be available for grooming use.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

Art Unit: 3643

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 6 and 7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over U.S. Patent No. 2,160,618 to Kreutzig.

Regarding Claim 6, Kreutzig is silent on the outer gripping surface is textured to facilitate a firm grip thereon. However, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to modify the teachings at the time of the invention since it is old and notoriously well-known to texture a surface for a better ergonomic grip to increase traction between the hand and the surface via increased friction to prevent slippage.

Regarding Claim 7, Kreutzig as modified is silent on outer gripping surface is fabricated from resilient elastomeric material. However, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to modify the teachings at the time of the invention since the modification is merely the selection of a known material for intended use [Leshin 125 USPQ 416] and is an engineering design choice to meet certain cost parameters.

Claims 8, 9, 19, and 20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over U.S. Patent No. 2,160,618 to Kreutzig in view of U.S. Patent Des. 143,972 to Kahn.

Regarding Claims 8, 19 and 20, Kreutzig is silent on comb is configured to have a first coarse group of tines that are spaced from each other by a first distance and a second fine group of tines that are spaced from each other by a second distance that is less than said first distance. However, Kahn teaches two sets of fines, coarse and fine (Kahn Fig. 1). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to modify the teachings of Kreutzig with the teachings of Kahn for enhanced grooming capabilities through both thick and thin hair.

Regarding Claim 9, Kreutzig as modified teaches the comb may be adjusted in a first direction with respect to said housing so as to permit efficient use of said first coarse group of tines, and wherein said comb may alternatively be adjusted in a second direction that is opposite from said first direction to permit efficient use of said second fine group of tines (Kreutzig Fig. 1 and 2).

Claim 14 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over U.S. Patent No. 2,160,618 to Kreutzig in view of U.S. Patent No. 2,772,682 to Pflueger et al.

Regarding Claim 14, Kreutzig is silent on the tines being rotatably mounted with respect to said comb. However, Pflueger teaches it is old and notoriously well-known to have the tine rotatably mounted with respect to the comb (Pflueger Fig. 6 #19). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to modify the teachings of Kreutzig with the teachings of Pflueger at the time of the invention to facilitate combing of knotted portions of the hair as taught by Pflueger (Pflueger Col. 1 line 22-23).

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
